DECLASSIFIED

I called on Chancellor Adenauer at noon. He had the accomplished interpreter Weber with him. He asked me to communicate to Secretary Dulles his sense of the urgent necessity of the United States taking some favorable action on the war assets question. This would be most helpful to his campaign.

States a disposition to make concessions which in turn might render an understanding possible. A meeting of the present working representatives was set for tomorrow afternoon. It will be followed by a conversation between the Ambassadors of the Sending States on Wednesday, July 10. The following day they will meet again with Grewe, who is hopeful they will have received at least preliminary instructions from their home Governments by that time. Succeeding meetings between Grewe or his representative and the Ambassadors will take place each Thursday until their deliberations are brought to a close.

The Ambassadors remained on after Grewe and the Belgium Chairman of the Conference had left the room [redacted]
